PROTECTION/RULE OF LAW CONTEXT

Other Legal Protections and Stipulations

What is the current status/condition of legal and rule of law structures?

Is the police force/legal system currently functioning effectively?

What are current protocols for following up on reported protection incidents?

What appear to be the incident reporting priorities of the police currently?

What is the gender breakdown of the police force?

Is there a presence of a trained and currently functioning “victim friendly unit” or “survivor-friendly” unit (e.g. a unit within the police force trained on appropriate interaction with/treatment of either child or adult survivors of gender-based violence)?

GBV Reporting Protocols

Who, if anyone, is required by law to report incidents of GBV to police authorities?

What types of GBV fall under the mandatory reporting laws?

What are the penalties for non-reporting?

Are there special circumstances for which reporting is not mandatory?

What types of cases related to GBV have you seen here at this police post or court? (You may have already gotten this information from the data collected in the previous section of the situational analysis.)

What happened to those cases? Are there some situations the police are more likely to investigate or follow up than others? (Probe for the reasons that may contribute to limited follow-up, such as a woman who drops the charges against her husband for domestic violence and the investigation is therefore dropped; or police perceptions that claims of rape are a cover for a woman's promiscuity and therefore not worthy of investigation, etc.)

From what individuals or organizations do police typically receive or allow reports? (Victims? Family members of victims? Health professionals? NGOs? Others?)

Medical Documentation Required to Make a Police Report: (Describe)

Standard Form

Medical Exam Findings

Forensic Evidence

Signature/Authorization of Doctor

Additional Signatures or Authorizations (List who)

Other Documentation

Is the requirement of these documents ever listed as a reason given by survivors for NOT reporting or seeking support (health or otherwise)?

What barriers are there to survivors accessing any of this documentation?

How do survivors, medical personnel, or police access this documentation?
